CREDIT CARD RECORD

If you lose a credit card, you must report it to the issuing company. Until you do so, you are liable for all charges. In addition to your credit and bank cards, we suggest you make a list of all other cards your family has (health, auto, points, etc.) along with the phone numbers of the companies to notify. You don't want to start hunting for this information after your cards have been lost or stolen.

KEEP IN MIND

Most people accumulate possessions over the years, without knowing how much their possessions are really worth. It is important to make an inventory of these items. Here are 2 good reasons why:

- The inventory form will serve as a reminder in case you make a claim.
- Completing it will enable you to establish a more accurate value of your possessions which will help you obtain adequate coverage.

1. Fill out the form.
2. Compare the total amount with the contents coverage on your home insurance policy.
3. Keep a copy of this form in a secure place outside of your residence (e.g. bank safety deposit box).
4. In addition to this inventory form, we recommend that you keep the purchase receipt, instruction manual and serial number for all appliances and electronic equipment.
5. Please contact us if you own any high-value collectibles, artwork, jewellery, or special items that may require additional coverage. To ensure adequate protection for these items, a written appraisal may be required.
6. In addition to this form, you can also take a photographic or video record of your personal property. Remember to capture all angles for each room in your house, and store the photo or video record in a safe place outside your home.

N.B.—If you have replacement cost coverage, the estimated value should correspond to today's cost price, including taxes.

* Please contact us to ensure adequate coverage for any of your high-value jewellery items.
